SOME SIGNS OF ACTIVITY IN THE BROOKLYN BRIBERY CASE-ISLES MAY BE AFRAID TO RECOGNIZE "COLONEL WEBSTER" WHEN THEY MEET-MACHINE POLITI-

CIANS SAID TO HAVE CAUSED HIM TO FEAR HARM.

The Police Department and the Kings County District-Attorney's office, stirred to activity by The Tribune's criticism of their apathy in dealing with the Brooklyn bribery scandal, have placed Colonel William Hepburn under surveillance. District-Attorney Marean said yesferday that he knew where Hepburn was, that he was being watched by the police, and that if he attempted to go in any direction except to New-York City he would be placed under arrest at once. Otherwise he would have an opportunity to surrender himself to-morrow or Tuesday, probably Tuesday, to submit to the identification of Frederick G. Isles. Isles has made oath that at the Sinclair Hotel, in Manhattan, a man who answers the description of Hepburn offered him $25,000 if he would prevent the March Grand Jury from finding indictments for conspiracy against Theodore B. Willis and William E. Philips. Hepburn is a man of striking personality, with a pronounced cast of features, and Isles will have no difficulty in recognizing at once whether or not he is the man who attempted to save Hepburn's relative, Police Commissioner Philips, and Philips's relative, Willis, from being publicly and officially charged with

District-Attorney Marean held a long conference on the bribery case with his assistant, John F. Clarke, yesterday morning, and in the afternoon he held another conference with David Welch, who is the attorney both of Charles M. Winant, who has been arrested as a result of Isles's confession, and of Hepburn, who is yet to be identified. Mr. Marean intimated strongly that Hepburn left New-York City to avoid arrest, with the intention of getting time to think the matter over, and possibly to provide for his bail.

"Did he leave to avoid arrest?" was the direct question put to Mr. Marean.

"Yes, I believe that he left to avoid arrest," he replied, "to avoid arrest until he can get bail. But I know where he is, and he will be here on Tuesday. He is not in Philadelphia.

"I know now that he disappeared immediately upon the publication of his name in the newspapers. I know just where he went. If it was necessary he could be arrested by me to-day, as he is under surveillance, and the instant he starts to leave the town where he is, in another State, officers will take him in charge. I have an absolute promise that I can rely upon that he will not leave the place in question with an idea of avoiding the police, but will be here in this office on Tuesday, prepared to give ball, if such a thing is required at the time." "Have the police had the man under surveillance for several days?" inquired The Tribune

"Yes," replied the District-Attorney. "Could the man have been extradited?"

At this point Mr. Marean, who was in his bicycle suit, rushed away to get his bicycle, saying that he must have a ride, so that for a while at least he could get this case out of his mind. The opportunity was not offered, therefore, to ask Mr. Marean the interesting question as to why the police had not used toward Colonel Hepburn the diligence that is usual in a case of this kind.

WELCH AND MAREAN CONFER.

David Welch, Hepb irn's counsel, called on Mr. Marean, but neither he nor Mr. Marean would tell the purpose of the call. Mr. Welch begged to be excused when asked for information about Hepburn. It is thought that under the prodding of The Tribune Mr. Marean had required more assurances that Hepburn would certainly appear this week, and that Welch came to give these assurances. The alleged relation of Hepburn to this case may throw some light upon the selection of David Welch as counsel to Charles M. Winant. Winant is a Brooklyn man, and probably never had heard of Welch until he was produced as his attorney. It is possible that Hepburn may have had something to do toward securing the retention of Mr. Welch as attorney for Winant. It is said, in fact, that Hepburn was at Police Headquarters, in Manhattan, on the day that Isles was making his confession. Isles is convinced that he will have no trouble in identifying "Colonel Webster." If he does identify Hepburn as the man the District-Attorney's office in Brooklyn promises that Hepburn will be arrested on the spot. Isles will at once swear to an affidavit, and Magistrate Brenner will be present to issue

There is a rumor that Isles may be afraid to say that Hepburn is "Webster" even if he recognizes him when he meets him face to face. This is based on the rumor that Isles is afraid of bodily harm because of the confession he has made and the damage he is still able to do. Some of the machine Republican politicians are taking Isles's confession in an ugly manner. Their comments on the man are unfriendly, and Their comments on the man are unfriendly, and when Isles comes to the Courthouse he runs a sort of gantlet of evil glances from those who would probably be willing to injure him if they dered. When Isles came into the District-Attorney's office on Friday his face was extremely pale. Whether this came from his fear of being in the neighborhood of the class of smalify politicians, who look on the confession of a political crime, especially a confession that involves others, as a cardinal offence, or whether his paleness came from worry and sleeplessness, is simply a matter of conjecture, as Isles himself refused to talk.

POINTS IN REGARD TO OHLSEN.

Captain Reynolds of the Brooklyn Detective Bureau is more convinced than ever that Grand Juror Henry D. Ohlsen committed suicide, and was not murdered. He said that he had every reason to believe that the Manhattan detective force takes the same view of the case that he

Grand Jury, but I don't believe there is any conspiracy, and I don't propose to make any arrests or to present the matter to the Grand Jury. I will stake everything on the statement that this is simply a case of suicide."

It was said yesterday that Captain McClusky of the Manhattan Detective Bureau had come over to Brooklyn to investigate the case himself. Captain Reynolds said he had no knowledge of such a visit.

SENSATIONAL STORIES UNTRUE.

Some newspapers are using the Ohlsen case as a basis for the wildest kind of stories, many of which have absolutely no basis of truth. One of the stories yesterday was to the effect that Willis, Dady, Woodruff and Hepburn, during the sessions of the March Grand Jury, held several conferences in Room No. 16, Clarendon Hotel. Lieutenant-Governor Woodruff said yesterday that he was in Albany during all that time, and that he had not seen Willis and Philips since the investigation began. Hepburn, he said, he did not know. It is true that Woodruff, Willis and Philips formerly had conferences in Room No. 16, at the Clarendon, but that was nearly a year ago, when this room was engaged by Mr. Woodruff for the purpose of conducting Platt's campaign in Kings County.

Another paper made an effort to give the Brooklyn scandal a Spanish twist by publishing an alleged postal-card which, it said, had been received by Ohlsen before his death, with the following horrible threat: "Germans are not wanted. This is a Latin country."

In this way an element of levity is introduced into a situation that is considered to be extremely serious by the people of Brooklyn. the sessions of the March Grand Jury, held sev-

STRIKE ON THE NEW TOMBS PRISON.

The employment of non-union stonecutters by P. J. Carlin, the builder and contractor who is erecting the new Tombs prison, led to a general strike on the work yesterday afternoon. The strike extended to the yards where the stone for the new prison is being cut. There seventy-five granite-cutiers stopped work. It is expected that next week the quarrymen at Pine Island. Maine, will be called out, and the supply of stone for the prison will then be cut off. Mr. Carlin, it is asserted, has been fighting organized labor for a long time in Brooklyn. He says he will finish the prison with non-union mechanics. His force of non-union stone-setters, it is said, is working for 32 a day less than the journeymen stone-setters' scale of weges.
